EXPERIENCE • PATIENCE • TRUST

Periodontist DR. DANETTE RISO ILLIG, a specialist in gum disease, states that research has found that certain strains of bacteria found in dental plaque can be implicated in heart disease. In patients with periodontal disease, gum tissues are inflamed and bleed easily, leading to introduction of pathogenic bacteria in the bloodstream, which may build-up on heart and blood vessel walls. Immune responses to these bacterial plaques and to vessel walls may lead to heart attack or stroke occurrence. Early research found that patients with untreated periodontal disease have increased risk of heart disease, as well as adverse pregnancy outcomes, respiratory disease and diabetes.

With 32 years of experience, Dr. Illig is equipped to perform bone and soft tissue regeneration procedures, non-surgical treatments using contemporary antibiotic therapies, cosmetic periodontal plastic surgery for gum aesthetics and digital x-rays. She is also on the leading edge of periodontal care for women with gum disease related to systemic diseases, medications and hormonal influences. Visit: www.danetteilligmd.com
